Let's Talk.

Your phone is a vital part of your life. You use it to stay in touch with friends and family. You also use it to find out information, like when a store opens.

For people who are deaf or hard of hearing or have difficulty speaking, it's essential, too, but when they call, many people, especially businesses, hang up.

MassRelay solves the problem by helping people communicate effectively. We create a vibrant handshake between communities, gateways to new business, and bridges of opportunity that enhance the quality of life for everyone.

MassRelay is free, simple to use, accommodates many communication styles, and protects privileged calls. Community members interact on an equal footing with each other and the world at large.

Make calls to doctors, lawyers, or other service professionals with confidence, knowing that your conversations are secure.

Let's Call.

MassRelay is there for family and friends, too, no matter where they are located. Parents could use a cell phone from a car to call ahead before visiting, or you can let a friend know you'll be late for a scheduled lunch.

Soon to come, you may identify Relay friendly companies quickly through our searchable database or read more about them on our web site.

No other service makes it so convenient or easy to engage and include everyone.

Let's Partner.

Community involvement is a smart business practice, especially when it's inclusive. MassRelay helps a business extend its reach while providing an important community service. Privileged conversation is protected; patient or client confidentiality secure.

Estimates place the deaf or hard of hearing population in Massachusetts at 8.6%, or more than a half million people. By working with us, companies gain access to this market, which is very eager to do business.

We link your business to our community by creating a firm handshake. It's good marketing for you and good sense; a competitive edge and public spirited. Our members will see your spotlight, view your web page on our web site, or, eventually, search our database of Relay friendly businesses. The MassRelay decal announces to everyone that you're Relay friendly.

It's all very simple and free, yet requires no special equipment.
